Annex I

Decision 46/III Statement on the tenth anniversary of Security Council resolution 1325 (2000)

Armed conflict exacerbates inequalities which exist between women and men in different forms and to varying degrees in all societies and that make women particularly vulnerable when armed conflict breaks out. On the occasion of the tenth anniversary of Security Council resolution 1325 (2000), on women and peace and security, the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women wishes to reaffirm its commitment to the spirit of that resolution and its integral link with the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women.

The adoption of resolution 1325 (2000) marked an important international political recognition that women and gender are relevant to international peace and security. For the first time, the Security Council addressed the disproportionate and unique impact of armed conflict on women and recognized the undervalued and underutilized contributions women make to conflict prevention and resolution, peacekeeping and peacebuilding. It also stressed the importance of women's equal and full participation as active agents in peace and security.

Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) recognized as a historic and unprecedented document, has built on a number of global policy documents, resolutions, statements and reports and treaties, including the Convention, which provides an overall framework for its full implementation. The Convention is a comprehensive women's human rights instrument aimed at eliminating all forms of discrimination and violence against women which is applicable in times of peace and in situations of armed conflict.

Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) recalls the preamble to the Convention, which spells out that the cause of peace requires the full participation of women on equal terms with men in all fields and, by so doing, holds out a promise to women across the globe that their rights will be protected and that all barriers to their equal participation and full involvement in the maintenance and promotion of sustainable peace will be removed.

The Convention and resolution 1325 (2000) seek to move forward the gender equality agenda in conflict and post-conflict situations and seek to ensure that women's experiences, needs and perspectives are fully incorporated into the political, legal and social decisions that are aimed at achieving durable peace, reconciliation and development.

The adoption by the Security Council of resolutions 1325 (2000), 1820 (2008) and 1889 (2009) bears testimony to the progress made, during the past decade, in the area of women and peace and security. These resolutions have brought a much-needed and welcome visibility to the issue of gender mainstreaming at all stages of the peace process, including during peacekeeping, peacebuilding and post-conflict reconstruction.

While much has been done in response to resolution 1325 (2000) in the 10 years since its adoption, progress in implementation is still limited and armed conflict continues to have a devastating impact on women and girls. Conflicts are often accompanied by gender-based violence and evidence suggests an increasing scale and brutality of sexual violence with rape often used as a tool of war. Women and girls are increasingly targeted, as a tactic of war, to humiliate, dominate, instil fear in, punish, disperse and/or forcibly relocate members of a community or ethnic group.

Ten years after the adoption of resolution 1325 (2000), the situation remains far from satisfactory, with gaps and challenges remaining, particularly in the post-conflict period, where women's potential contribution to peacebuilding efforts is constrained owing to their exclusion from decision-making processes. While women are widely recognized as effective agents of peace, they still have little access to power and peace negotiations. There remain major gaps in the implementation of resolution 1325 (2000) and no mechanism of accountability to ensure its implementation has yet been instituted by the Security Council.

The Committee welcomes the elaboration of global indicators to track, measure and monitor implementation of resolution 1325 (2000) pursuant to paragraph 17 of resolution 1889 (2009).

The Committee also supports the adoption by States Members of the United Nations of national action plans on resolution 1325 (2000) as a key tool in national level implementation and it recommends that technical assistance be provided to build the capacity of States for the elaboration and adoption of national action plans as well as the development of comprehensive monitoring and evaluation mechanisms, all of which are closely linked to the implementation of the Convention.

On the occasion of the tenth anniversary of resolution 1325 (2000), the Committee emphasizes the synergy which exists between the standards in the Convention and those set out in resolution 1325 (2000) and reaffirms its determination to provide concrete strategic guidance to States parties with regard to actions to be taken on the broad commitments outlined in resolution 1325 (2000).

The Committee recalls its reporting guidelines under which States parties are required to provide information on the implementation of resolution 1325 (2000) whenever appropriate and reaffirms its resolve to continue to address resolution 1325 (2000) in its constructive dialogue with States parties in the examination of their reports, in order to broaden and strengthen gender equality in the context of conflict, peacebuilding and post-conflict reconstruction by encouraging Governments to ensure that these rights are realized, by setting up adequate responses to women's needs and protection and by ensuring women's full participation in decision-making at national, regional and international levels.

In this world of continuing instability and violence, with civilian victims often outnumbering casualties among combatants, the Committee supports and echoes the call of the Security Council for all parties to come together for an improved protection of women and girls and commit themselves to ending impunity and prosecuting those responsible for all forms of violence, including rape and other forms of sexual violence.

The Committee urges Member States to put resolutions 1325 (2000), 1820 (2008) and 1889 (2009) into practice by initiating, whenever appropriate, international investigation with special attention paid to sexual violence and urges the Security Council to continue to support current efforts to resolve this situation in line with the principles those resolutions embody.

The Committee emphasizes the need for a concerted and integrated approach that would place implementation of Security Council resolutions 1325 (2000), 1820 (2008) and 1889 (2009) into a broader framework of the implementation of the Convention and its Optional Protocol. It also calls on States parties to enhance collaboration with civil society and non-governmental organizations working on implementation of resolutions 1325 (2000), 1820 (2008) and 1889 (2009) and stresses that this is a matter of concern to the guardians of global peace and security.

Annex V

Report of the Working Group on Communications under the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women on its seventeenth session

1. The Working Group on Communications under the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women held its seventeenth session from 7 to 9 July 2010. All members attended the session.
2. The Working Group adopted its agenda as set out in the appendix to the present report.
3. The Working Group discussed correspondence that had been received by the secretariat of the Committee since its sixteenth session. Out of a total of 16 letters received from individuals and organizations, 13 had been categorized as failing to have sufficient information for the Committee to register and consider the case. The Working Group engaged in a discussion about how this type of correspondence should be handled by the secretariat and the type of information which should be provided to the Committee.
4. In the framework of the discussion on the handling of correspondence and in the light of the redesign of the database by the Petitions Unit, the Working Group had an exchange of views with the Head of the Unit on how the database could be improved so as to manage registered cases efficiently and in a timely manner, including through a new functionality that will automatically generate reminders.
5. The Working Group reviewed the status of eight pending communications.
6. The Working Group further discussed and finalized a draft recommendation in relation to the admissibility of communication No. 19/2008. It also discussed and finalized a draft recommendation on the merits of communication No. 18/2008, which the Group had previously declared to be admissible.
7. The Working Group took note of two academic articles, referring, inter alia, to the Committee's case law: one on the role of the Committee in eliminating gender stereotyping and another on the due diligence standard with respect to the obligation to eliminate gender stereotypes on the grounds of article 5 (a) of the Convention.
8. The Working Group discussed the issue of both parties, that is, States and authors, not complying with deadlines for submitting their comments on registered cases and the subsequent delays in their disposal.
9. The Working Group discussed ways to increase outreach activities in relation to the promotion of the individual complaints procedure under the Optional Protocol.

Action taken

10. The Working Group decided:

(a) That its eighteenth session would be held from 25 to 27 October 2010 in Geneva;^a

(b) To register a new case against Canada (as communication No. 25/2010) and to appoint Ms. Patten as case rapporteur;

(c) To request the secretariat to communicate with the Chair of the Working Group on correspondence which will be received by the secretariat between the seventeenth session and the eighteenth session of the Working Group;

(d) To request the secretariat to provide more information, in the note that it prepares on the correspondence received, on the communications that have insufficient information for the Committee to register and consider the case;

(e) To register, when appropriate, a communication that, prima facie, fails to meet the admissibility criteria, and dispose of it through an inadmissibility decision without referring the communication to the State party concerned, in accordance with article 6, paragraph 1, of the Optional Protocol;

(f) To continue its discussion on its working methods, including compliance with deadlines and the structure of its draft decisions, during its next session;

(g) To continue discussions on the possibility of holding, on an annual basis, two 5-day sessions of the Working Group, instead of three 3-day sessions each year;

(h) To request the secretariat to bear in mind the potential of the United Nations regional economic commissions in the framework of the promotion and dissemination of the Convention and the Optional Protocol;

(i) To request the secretariat to give its urgent attention to making the Committee website as user-friendly as possible.

11. The Working Group decided to recommend to the Committee to engage in discussion with the new gender architecture with the aim of giving high visibility to the Convention and its Optional Protocol.

12. The Working Group submitted the following issues for the Committee's consideration and decision:

(a) Draft recommendation relating to communication No. 19/2008;

(b) Draft recommendation relating to communication No. 18/2008.

^a At the time of adoption of the report, a request had been made to change the dates of the session of the Working Group. The change was not possible, however, and the eighteenth session of the Working Group was held from 29 September to 1 October 2010, as originally planned.

The Convention is subject to ratification and is open to accession. In accordance with its article 27, the Convention entered into force on 3 September 1981. Since the forty-sixth session of the Committee, there had been no additional ratifications or accessions to the Convention. Two additional States parties, namely, Singapore and Bulgaria, deposited their instruments of acceptance with the Secretary-General to the amendment to article 20, paragraph 1, of the Convention, concerning the Committee's meeting time, on 30 August 2010 and 25 September 2010, respectively, bringing the number of States that have accepted the amendment to 59. The amendment shall enter into force when it has been accepted by a two-thirds majority of States parties to the Convention, that is 124 States parties.

2. As at the same date, there were 99 States parties to the Optional Protocol to the Convention, which was adopted by the General Assembly in its resolution 54/4 and opened for signature on 10 December 1999. The Optional Protocol is subject to ratification and is open to accession. In accordance with its article 16, the Optional Protocol entered into force on 22 December 2000. There were no additional ratifications or accessions since the last session.

3. Updated information on the number of States parties to the Convention, to the amendment to article 20, paragraph 1, of the Convention and to the Optional Protocol to the Convention, as well as lists of States signatories and parties and the texts of declarations, reservations, objections and other relevant information is available from the website of the United Nations Treaty Collection (<http://treaties.un.org>), which is maintained by the Treaty Section of the Office of Legal Affairs, which discharges the depositary functions of the Secretary-General.

Annex III

Decision 47/V General recommendation on the core obligations of States parties under article 2 of the Convention

I. Introduction

1. Through this general recommendation, the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women aims to clarify the scope and meaning of article 2 of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, which provides ways for States parties to implement domestically the substantive provisions of the Convention. The Committee encourages States parties to translate this general recommendation into national and local languages and to disseminate it widely to all branches of Government, civil society, including the media, academia and human rights and women's organizations and institutions.

2. The Convention is a dynamic instrument that accommodates the development of international law. Since its first session in 1982, the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women and other actors at the national and international levels have contributed to the clarification and understanding of the substantive content of the Convention's articles, the specific nature of discrimination against women and the various instruments required for combating such discrimination.

3. The Convention is part of a comprehensive international human rights legal framework directed at ensuring the enjoyment by all of all human rights and at eliminating all forms of discrimination against women on the basis of sex and gender. The Charter of the United Nations, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,^a the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights,^b the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,^b the Convention on the Rights of the Child,^c the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families^d and the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities^e contain explicit provisions guaranteeing women equality with men in the enjoyment of the rights they enshrine, while other international human rights treaties, such as the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination,^f are implicitly grounded in the concept of non-discrimination on the basis of sex and gender. The International Labour Organization (ILO) Conventions No. 100 (1951) concerning Equal Remuneration for Men and Women Workers for Work of Equal Value, No. 111 (1958) concerning Discrimination in Respect of Employment and Occupation and No. 156 (1981) concerning Equal Opportunities and Equal Treatment for Men and Women Workers: Workers with Family Responsibilities, the Convention against Discrimination in Education, the Declaration on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women,^g the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action,^h the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Developmentⁱ and the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action^j also contribute to an international legal regime of equality for women with men and non-discrimination. Likewise, the obligations of States entered into under regional human rights systems are complementary to the universal human rights framework.

4. The objective of the Convention is the elimination of all forms of discrimination against women on the basis of sex. It guarantees women the equal recognition, enjoyment and exercise of all human rights and fundamental freedoms in the political, economic, social, cultural, civil, domestic or any other field, irrespective of their marital status, and on a basis of equality with men.

5. Although the Convention only refers to sex-based discrimination, interpreting article 1 together with articles 2 (f) and 5 (a) indicates that the Convention covers gender-based discrimination against women. The term “sex” here refers to biological differences between men and women. The term “gender” refers to socially constructed identities, attributes and roles for women and men and society’s social and cultural meaning for these biological differences resulting in hierarchical relationships between women and men and in the distribution of power and rights favouring men and disadvantaging women. This social positioning of women and men is affected by political, economic, cultural, social, religious, ideological and environmental factors and can be changed by culture, society and community. The application of the Convention to gender-based discrimination is made clear by the definition of discrimination contained in article 1. This definition points out that any distinction, exclusion or restriction which has the effect or purpose of impairing or nullifying the recognition, enjoyment or exercise by women of human rights and fundamental freedoms is discrimination, even where discrimination was not intended. This would mean that identical or neutral treatment of women and men might constitute discrimination against women if such treatment resulted in or had the effect of women being denied the exercise of a right because there was no recognition of the pre-existing gender-based disadvantage and inequality that women face. The views of the Committee on this matter are evidenced by its consideration of reports, its general recommendations, decisions, suggestions and statements, its consideration of individual communications and its conduct of inquiries under the Optional Protocol.

6. Article 2 is crucial to the full implementation of the Convention, since it identifies the nature of the general legal obligations of States parties. The obligations enshrined in article 2 are inextricably linked with all other substantive provisions of the Convention, as States parties have the obligation to ensure that all the rights enshrined in the Convention are fully respected at the national level.

7. Article 2 of the Convention should be read in conjunction with articles 3, 4, 5 and 24 and in the light of the definition of discrimination contained in article 1. The scope of the general obligations contained in article 2 should also be construed in the light of the general recommendations, concluding observations, views and other statements issued by the Committee, including the reports on the inquiry procedures and the decisions of individual cases. The spirit of the Convention covers other rights that are not explicitly mentioned in the Convention, but that have an impact on the achievement of equality of women with men, which impact represents a form of discrimination against women.

II. Nature and scope of obligations of States parties

8. Article 2 calls on States parties to condemn discrimination against women in “all its forms”, while article 3 refers to appropriate measures that States parties are expected to take in “all fields” to ensure the full development and advancement of women. Through these provisions, the Convention anticipates the emergence of new forms of discrimination that had not been identified at the time of its drafting.

9. Under article 2, States parties must address all aspects of their legal obligations under the Convention to respect, protect and fulfil women’s right to non-discrimination and to the enjoyment of equality. The obligation to respect requires that States parties refrain from making laws, policies, regulations, programmes, administrative procedures and institutional structures that directly or indirectly result in the denial of the equal enjoyment by women of their civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights. The obligation to protect requires that States parties protect women from discrimination by private actors and take steps directly aimed at eliminating customary and all other practices that prejudice and perpetuate the notion of inferiority or superiority of either of the sexes, and of stereotyped roles for men and women. The obligation to fulfil requires that States parties take a wide variety of steps to ensure that women and men enjoy equal rights de jure and de facto, including, where appropriate, the adoption of temporary special measures in line with article 4, paragraph 1, of the Convention and general recommendation No. 25 on article 4, paragraph 1, of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, on temporary special measures. This entails obligations of means or conduct and obligations of results. States parties should consider that they have to fulfil their legal obligations to all women through designing public policies, programmes and institutional frameworks that are aimed at fulfilling the specific needs of women leading to the full development of their potential on an equal basis with men.

10. States parties have an obligation not to cause discrimination against women through acts or omissions; they are further obliged to react actively against discrimination against women, regardless of whether such acts or omissions are perpetrated by the State or by private actors. Discrimination can occur through the failure of States to take necessary legislative measures to ensure the full realization of women’s rights, the failure to adopt national policies aimed at achieving equality between women and men and the failure to enforce relevant laws. Likewise, States parties have an international responsibility to create and continuously improve statistical databases and the analysis of all forms of discrimination against women in general and against women belonging to specific vulnerable groups in particular.

11. The obligations of States parties do not cease in periods of armed conflict or in states of emergency resulting from political events or natural disasters. Such situations have a deep impact on and broad consequences for the equal enjoyment and exercise by women of their fundamental rights. States parties should adopt strategies and take measures addressed to the particular needs of women in times of armed conflict and states of emergency.

12. Although subject to international law, States primarily exercise territorial jurisdiction. The obligations of States parties apply, however, without discrimination to both citizens and non-citizens, including refugees, asylum-seekers, migrant workers and stateless persons, within their territory or effective control, even if not situated within the territory. States parties are responsible for all their actions affecting human rights, regardless of whether the affected persons are in their territory.

13. Article 2 is not limited to the prohibition of discrimination against women caused directly or indirectly by States parties. Article 2 also imposes a due diligence obligation on States parties to prevent discrimination by private actors. In some cases, a private actor's acts or omission of acts may be attributed to the State under international law. States parties are thus obliged to ensure that private actors do not engage in discrimination against women as defined in the Convention. The appropriate measures that States parties are obliged to take include the regulation of the activities of private actors with regard to education, employment and health policies and practices, working conditions and work standards, and other areas in which private actors provide services or facilities, such as banking and housing.

III. General obligations contained in article 2

A. Introductory sentence of article 2

14. The introductory sentence of article 2 reads: "States Parties condemn discrimination against women in all its forms, agree to pursue by all appropriate means and without delay a policy of eliminating discrimination against women".

15. The first obligation of States parties referred to in the chapeau of article 2 is the obligation to "condemn discrimination against women in all its forms". States parties have an immediate and continuous obligation to condemn discrimination. They are obliged to proclaim to their population and the international community their total opposition to all forms of discrimination against women at all levels and branches of Government and their determination to bring about the elimination of discrimination against women. The term "discrimination in all its forms" clearly obligates the State party to be vigilant in condemning all forms of discrimination, including forms that are not explicitly mentioned in the Convention or that may be emerging.

16. States parties are under an obligation to respect, protect and fulfil the right to non-discrimination of women and to ensure the development and advancement of women in order that they improve their position and implement their right of de jure and de facto or substantive equality with men. States parties shall ensure that there is neither direct nor indirect discrimination against women. Direct discrimination against women constitutes different treatment explicitly based on grounds of sex and gender differences. Indirect discrimination against women occurs when a law, policy, programme or practice appears to be neutral insofar as it relates to men and women, but has a discriminatory effect in practice on women because pre-existing inequalities are not addressed by the apparently neutral measure. Moreover, indirect discrimination can exacerbate existing inequalities owing to a failure to recognize structural and historical patterns of discrimination and unequal power relationships between women and men.

17. States parties also have an obligation to ensure that women are protected against discrimination committed by public authorities, the judiciary, organizations, enterprises or private individuals, in the public and private spheres. This protection shall be provided by competent tribunals and other public institutions and enforced by sanctions and remedies, where appropriate. States parties should ensure that all Government bodies and organs are fully aware of the principles of equality and non-discrimination on the basis of sex and gender and that adequate training and awareness-raising programmes are set up and carried out in this respect.

18. Intersectionality is a basic concept for understanding the scope of the general obligations of States parties contained in article 2. The discrimination of women based on sex and gender is inextricably linked with other factors that affect women, such as race, ethnicity, religion or belief, health, status, age, class, caste and sexual orientation and gender identity. Discrimination on the basis of sex or gender may affect women belonging to such groups to a different degree or in different ways to men. States parties must legally recognize such intersecting forms of discrimination and their compounded negative impact on the women concerned and prohibit them. They also need to adopt and pursue policies and programmes designed to eliminate such occurrences, including, where appropriate, temporary special measures in accordance with article 4, paragraph 1, of the Convention and general recommendation No. 25.

19. Discrimination against women on the basis of sex and gender comprises, as stated in general recommendation No. 19 on violence against women, gender-based violence, namely, violence that is directed against a woman because she is a woman or violence that affects women disproportionately. It is a form of discrimination that seriously inhibits women's ability to enjoy and exercise their human rights and fundamental freedoms on the basis of equality with men. It includes acts that inflict physical, mental or sexual harm or suffering, threats of such acts, coercion and other deprivations of liberty, the violence that occurs within the family or domestic unit or within any other interpersonal relationship, or violence perpetrated or condoned by the State or its agents regardless of where it occurs. Gender-based violence may breach specific provisions of the Convention, regardless of whether those provisions expressly mention violence. States parties have a due diligence obligation to prevent, investigate, prosecute and punish such acts of gender-based violence.

20. The obligation to fulfil encompasses the obligation of States parties to facilitate access to and provide for the full realization of women's rights. The human rights of women shall be fulfilled by the promotion of de facto or substantive equality through all appropriate means, including through concrete and effective policies and programmes aimed at improving the position of women and achieving such equality, including, where appropriate, through the adoption of temporary special measures in accordance with article 4, paragraph 1, and general recommendation No. 25.

21. States parties in particular are obliged to promote the equal rights of girls since girls are part of the larger community of women and are more vulnerable to discrimination in such areas as access to basic education, trafficking, maltreatment, exploitation and violence. All these situations of discrimination are aggravated when the victims are adolescents. Therefore, States shall pay attention to the specific needs of (adolescent) girls by providing education on sexual and reproductive health and carrying out programmes that are aimed at the prevention of HIV/AIDS, sexual exploitation and teenage pregnancy.

22. Inherent to the principle of equality between men and women, or gender equality, is the concept that all human beings, regardless of sex, are free to develop their personal abilities, pursue their professional careers and make choices without the limitations set by stereotypes, rigid gender roles and prejudices. States parties are called upon to use exclusively the concepts of equality of women and men or gender equality and not to use the concept of gender equity in implementing their obligations under the Convention. The latter concept is used in some jurisdictions to refer to fair treatment of women and men, according to their respective needs. This may include equal treatment, or treatment that is different but considered equivalent in terms of rights, benefits, obligations and opportunities.

23. States parties also agree to “pursue by all appropriate means” a policy of eliminating discrimination against women. This obligation to use means or a certain way of conduct gives a State party a great deal of flexibility for devising a policy that will be appropriate for its particular legal, political, economic, administrative and institutional framework and that can respond to the particular obstacles and resistance to the elimination of discrimination against women existing in that State party. Each State party must be able to justify the appropriateness of the particular means it has chosen and demonstrate whether it will achieve the intended effect and result. Ultimately, it is for the Committee to determine whether a State party has indeed adopted all necessary measures at the national level aimed at achieving the full realization of the rights recognized in the Convention.

24. The main element of the introductory phrase of article 2 is the obligation of States parties to pursue a policy of eliminating discrimination against women. This requirement is an essential and critical component of a State party’s general legal obligation to implement the Convention. This means that the State party must immediately assess the de jure and de facto situation of women and take concrete steps to formulate and implement a policy that is targeted as clearly as possible towards the goal of fully eliminating all forms of discrimination against women and achieving women’s substantive equality with men. The emphasis is on movement forward: from the evaluation of the situation to the formulation and initial adoption of a comprehensive range of measures, to building on those measures continuously in the light of their effectiveness and new or emerging issues, in order to achieve the Convention’s goals. Such a policy must comprise constitutional and legislative guarantees, including an alignment with legal provisions at the domestic level and an amendment of conflicting legal provisions. It must also include other appropriate measures, such as comprehensive action plans and mechanisms for monitoring and implementing them, which provide a framework for the practical realization of the principle of formal and substantive equality of women and men.

25. The policy must be comprehensive in that it should apply to all fields of life, including those which are not explicitly mentioned in the text of the Convention. It must apply to both public and private economic spheres, as well as to the domestic sphere, and ensure that all branches of Government (executive, legislative and judicial branches) and all levels of Government assume their respective responsibilities for implementation. It should incorporate the entire range of measures that are appropriate and necessary in the particular circumstances of the State party.

26. The policy must identify women within the jurisdiction of the State party (including non-citizen, migrant, refugee, asylum-seeking and stateless women) as the rights-bearers, with particular emphasis on the groups of women who are most marginalized and who may suffer from various forms of intersectional discrimination.

27. The policy must ensure that women, as individuals and groups, have access to information about their rights under the Convention and are able to effectively promote and claim those rights. The State party should also ensure that women are able to participate actively in the development, implementation and monitoring of the policy. To this end, resources must be devoted to ensuring that human rights and women's non-governmental organizations are well-informed, adequately consulted and generally able to play an active role in the initial and subsequent development of the policy.

28. The policy must be action- and results-oriented in the sense that it should establish indicators, benchmarks and timelines, ensure adequate resourcing for all relevant actors and otherwise enable those actors to play their part in achieving the agreed benchmarks and goals. To this end, the policy must be linked to mainstream governmental budgetary processes in order to ensure that all aspects of the policy are adequately funded. It should provide for mechanisms that collect relevant sex-disaggregated data, enable effective monitoring, facilitate continuing evaluation and allow for the revision or supplementation of existing measures and the identification of any new measures that may be appropriate. Furthermore, the policy must ensure that there are strong and focused bodies (national women's machinery) within the executive branch of the Government that will take initiatives, coordinate and oversee the preparation and implementation of legislation, policies and programmes necessary to fulfil the obligations of the State party under the Convention. These institutions should be empowered to provide advice and analysis directly to the highest levels of Government. The policy should also ensure that independent monitoring institutions, such as national human rights institutes or independent women's commissions, are established or that existing national institutes receive a mandate to promote and protect the rights guaranteed under the Convention. The policy must engage the private sector, including business enterprises, the media, organizations, community groups and individuals, and enlist their involvement in adopting measures that will fulfil the goals of the Convention in the private economic sphere.

29. The words "without delay" make it clear that the obligation of States parties to pursue their policy, by all appropriate means, is of an immediate nature. This language is unqualified, and does not allow for any delayed or purposely chosen incremental implementation of the obligations that States assume upon ratification of or accession to the Convention. It follows that a delay cannot be justified on any grounds, including political, social, cultural, religious, economic, resource or other considerations or constraints within the State. Where a State party is facing resource constraints or needs technical or other expertise to facilitate the implementation of its obligations under the Convention, it may be incumbent upon it to seek international cooperation in order to overcome these difficulties.

B. Subparagraphs (a) to (g)

30. Article 2 expresses the obligation of States parties to implement the Convention in a general way. Its substantive requirements provide the framework for the implementation of the specific obligations identified in article 2, subparagraphs (a) to (g), and all other substantive articles of the Convention.

31. Subparagraphs (a), (f) and (g) establish the obligation of States parties to provide legal protection and to abolish or amend discriminatory laws and regulations as part of the policy of eliminating discrimination against women. States parties must ensure that, through constitutional amendments or by other appropriate legislative means, the principle of equality between women and men and of non-discrimination is enshrined in domestic law with an overriding and enforceable status. They must also enact legislation that prohibits discrimination in all fields of women's lives under the Convention and throughout their lifespan. States parties have an obligation to take steps to modify or abolish existing laws, regulations, customs and practices which constitute discrimination against women. Certain groups of women, including women deprived of their liberty, refugees, asylum-seeking and migrant women, stateless women, lesbian women, disabled women, women victims of trafficking, widows and elderly women, are particularly vulnerable to discrimination through civil and penal laws, regulations and customary law and practices. By ratifying the Convention or acceding to it, States parties undertake to incorporate the Convention into their domestic legal systems or to give it otherwise appropriate legal effect within their domestic legal orders in order to secure the enforceability of its provisions at the national level. The question of direct applicability of the provisions of the Convention at the national level is a question of constitutional law and depends on the status of treaties within the domestic legal order. The Committee takes the view, however, that the rights to non-discrimination and equality in all fields of women's lives throughout their lifespan, as enshrined in the Convention, may receive enhanced protection in those States where the Convention is automatically or through specific incorporation part of the domestic legal order. The Committee urges those States parties in which the Convention does not form part of the domestic legal order to consider incorporation of the Convention to render it part of domestic law, for example through a general law on equality, in order to facilitate the full realization of Convention rights as required by article 2.

32. Subparagraph (b) contains the obligation of States parties to ensure that legislation prohibiting discrimination and promoting equality of women and men provides appropriate remedies for women who are subjected to discrimination contrary to the Convention. This obligation requires that States parties provide reparation to women whose rights under the Convention have been violated. Without reparation the obligation to provide an appropriate remedy is not discharged. Such remedies should include different forms of reparation, such as monetary compensation, restitution, rehabilitation and reinstatement; measures of satisfaction, such as public apologies, public memorials and guarantees of non-repetition; changes in relevant laws and practices; and bringing to justice the perpetrators of violations of human rights of women.

33. According to subparagraph (c), States parties must ensure that courts are bound to apply the principle of equality as embodied in the Convention and to interpret the law, to the maximum extent possible, in line with the obligations of States parties under the Convention. However, where it is not possible to do so, courts should draw any inconsistency between national law, including national religious and customary laws, and the State party's obligations under the Convention to the attention of the appropriate authorities, since domestic laws may never be used as justification for failures by States parties to carry out their international obligations.

34. States parties must ensure that women can invoke the principle of equality in support of complaints of acts of discrimination contrary to the Convention, committed by public officials or by private actors. States parties must further ensure that women have recourse to affordable, accessible and timely remedies, with legal aid and assistance as necessary, to be settled in a fair hearing by a competent and independent court or tribunal, where appropriate. Where discrimination against women also constitutes an abuse of other human rights, such as the right to life and physical integrity in, for example, cases of domestic and other forms of violence, States parties are obliged to initiate criminal proceedings, bring the perpetrator(s) to trial and impose appropriate penal sanctions. States parties should financially support independent associations and centres providing legal resources for women in their work to educate women about their rights to equality and assist them in pursuing remedies for discrimination.

35. Subparagraph (d) establishes an obligation of States parties to abstain from engaging in any act or practice of direct or indirect discrimination against women. States parties must ensure that State institutions, agents, laws and policies do not directly or explicitly discriminate against women. They must also ensure that any laws, policies or actions that have the effect or result of generating discrimination are abolished.

36. Subparagraph (e) establishes an obligation of States parties to eliminate discrimination by any public or private actor. The types of measures that might be considered appropriate in this respect are not limited to constitutional or legislative measures. States parties should also adopt measures that ensure the practical realization of the elimination of discrimination against women and women's equality with men. This includes measures that: ensure that women are able to make complaints about violations of their rights under the Convention and have access to effective remedies; enable women to be actively involved in the formulation and implementation of measures; ensure Government accountability domestically; promote education and support for the goals of the Convention throughout the education system and in the community; encourage the work of human rights and women's non-governmental organizations; establish the necessary national human rights institutions or other machineries; and provide adequate administrative and financial support to ensure that the measures adopted make a real difference in women's lives in practice. The obligations incumbent upon States parties that require them to establish legal protection of the rights of women on an equal basis with men, ensure through competent national tribunals and other public institutions the effective protection of women against any act of discrimination and take all appropriate measures to eliminate discrimination against women by any person, organization or enterprise also extend to acts of national corporations operating extraterritorially.

IV. Recommendations to States parties

A. Implementation

37. In order to satisfy the requirement of “appropriateness”, the means adopted by States parties must address all aspects of their general obligations under the Convention to respect, protect, promote and fulfil women’s right to non-discrimination and to the enjoyment of equality with men. Thus, the terms “appropriate means” and “appropriate measures” used in article 2 and other articles of the Convention comprise measures ensuring that a State party:

(a) Abstains from performing, sponsoring or condoning any practice, policy or measure that violates the Convention (respect);

(b) Takes steps to prevent, prohibit and punish violations of the Convention by third parties, including in the home and in the community, and to provide reparation to the victims of such violations (protect);

(c) Fosters wide knowledge about and support for its obligations under the Convention (promote);

(d) Adopts temporary special measures that achieve sex non-discrimination and gender equality in practice (fulfil).

38. States parties should also adopt other appropriate measures of implementation such as:

(a) Promoting equality of women through the formulation and implementation of national plans of action and other relevant policies and programmes in line with the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, and allocating adequate human and financial resources;

(b) Establishing codes of conduct for public officials to ensure respect for the principles of equality and non-discrimination;

(c) Ensuring that reports of court decisions applying the provisions of the Convention on the equality and non-discrimination principles are widely distributed;

(d) Undertaking specific education and training programmes about the principles and provisions of the Convention directed to all Government agencies, public officials and, in particular, the legal profession and the judiciary;

(e) Enlisting all media in public education programmes about the equality of women and men, and ensuring in particular that women are aware of their right to equality without discrimination, of the measures taken by the State party to implement the Convention, and of the concluding observations by the Committee on the reports of the State party;

(f) Developing and establishing valid indicators of the status of and progress in the realization of human rights of women, and establishing and maintaining databases disaggregated by sex and related to the specific provisions of the Convention.

B. Accountability

39. The accountability of the States parties to implement their obligations under article 2 is engaged through the acts or omissions of acts of all branches of Government. The decentralization of power, through devolution and delegation of Government powers in both unitary and federal States, does not in any way negate or reduce the direct responsibility of the State party's national or federal Government to fulfil its obligations to all women within its jurisdiction. In all circumstances, the State party that ratified or acceded to the Convention remains responsible for ensuring full implementation throughout the territories under its jurisdiction. In any process of devolution, States parties have to make sure that the devolved authorities have the necessary financial, human and other resources to effectively and fully implement the obligations of the State party under the Convention. The Governments of States parties must retain powers to require such full compliance with the Convention and must establish permanent coordination and monitoring mechanisms to ensure that the Convention is respected and applied to all women within their jurisdiction without discrimination. Furthermore, there must be safeguards to ensure that decentralization or devolution does not lead to discrimination with regard to the enjoyment of rights by women in different regions.

40. Effective implementation of the Convention requires that a State party be accountable to its citizens and other members of its community at both the national and international levels. In order for this accountability function to work effectively, appropriate mechanisms and institutions must be put in place.

C. Reservations

41. The Committee considers article 2 to be the very essence of the obligations of States parties under the Convention. The Committee therefore considers reservations to article 2 or to subparagraphs of article 2 to be, in principle, incompatible with the object and purpose of the Convention and thus impermissible under article 28, paragraph 2. States parties that have entered reservations to article 2 or to subparagraphs of article 2 should explain the practical effect of those reservations on the implementation of the Convention and should indicate the steps taken to keep the reservations under review, with the goal of withdrawing them as soon as possible.

42. The fact that a State party has entered a reservation to article 2 or to subparagraphs of article 2 does not remove the need for that State party to comply with its other obligations under international law, including its obligations under other human rights treaties that the State party has ratified or to which it has acceded and under customary international human rights law relating to the elimination of discrimination against women. Where there is a discrepancy between reservations to provisions of the Convention and similar obligations under other international human rights treaties ratified by a State party or to which it has acceded, it should review its reservations to the Convention with a view to withdrawing them.

Annex IV

Decision 47/VI General recommendation on older women and the protection of their human rights

Introduction

1. The Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women, concerned about the multiple forms of discrimination experienced by older women and that older women's rights are not systematically addressed in States parties' reports decided, at its forty-second session, pursuant to article 21 of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, to adopt a general recommendation on older women and the protection of their human rights.

2. In its decision 26/III, the Committee decided to adopt a statement in which it recognized that the Convention "is an important tool for addressing the specific issue of the human rights of older women".^a General recommendation No. 25, on article 4, paragraph 1, of the Convention, on temporary special measures, also recognizes that age is one of the grounds on which women suffer multiple forms of discrimination. In particular, the Committee recognized the need for statistical data disaggregated by age and sex as a way to better assess the situation of older women.

3. The Committee affirms previous commitments to older women's rights enshrined in, inter alia, the Vienna International Plan of Action on Ageing,^b the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action,^c the United Nations Principles for Older Persons (General Assembly resolution 46/91, annex), the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development,^d the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing 2002,^e and the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights general comment No. 6, on the economic, social and cultural rights of older persons, and No. 19, on the right to social security.

Background

4. Current United Nations figures estimate that within 36 years there will be more people over the age of 60 than children under 15 years old, globally. They estimate that the number of older people in 2050 will be over 2 billion, or 22 per cent of the global population, an unprecedented doubling of the present 11 per cent of the population that is over 60.

5. The gendered nature of ageing reveals that women tend to live longer than men and that more older women than men live alone. There are 83 men for every 100 women over the age of 60, and only 59 men for every 100 women over the age of 80. Further, statistics from the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the United Nations Secretariat indicate that 80 per cent of men over 60 are married compared with only 48 per cent of older women.^f

6. This unprecedented demographic ageing, due to improved living standards and basic health-care systems as well as declines in fertility and rising longevity, can be considered a success of development efforts and one that is set to continue, making the twenty-first century the century of ageing. However, such changes in the population structure have profound human rights implications and increase the urgency of addressing the discrimination experienced by older women in a more comprehensive and systematic manner through the Convention.

7. The issue of ageing is shared by both developed and developing countries. The proportion of older persons in less developed countries is expected to rise from 8 per cent in 2010 to 20 per cent by 2050,^f while that of children will fall from 29 to 20 per cent.^g The number of older women living in less developed regions will increase by 600 million within the period from 2010 to 2050.^g This demographic shift presents major challenges in developing countries. The ageing of society is also a well-established trend and a significant feature in most developed countries.

8. Older women are not a homogeneous group. They have a great diversity of experience, knowledge, ability and skills. Their economic and social situation, however, is dependent on a range of demographic, political, environmental, cultural, employment, individual and family factors. The contributions of older women to society in public and private life as leaders in their communities, entrepreneurs, caregivers, advisers and mediators, among other roles, are invaluable.

Purpose and objectives of the recommendation

9. This general recommendation on older women and the protection of their human rights explores the relationship between all the articles of the Convention and ageing. It identifies the multiple forms of discrimination that women face as they age; outlines the content of the obligations assumed by States as parties to the Convention from the perspective of ageing with dignity and older women's rights; and, includes policy recommendations to mainstream the responses to the concerns of older women into national strategies, development initiatives and positive action so that older women can participate fully, without discrimination and on a basis of equality with men.

10. The general recommendation also provides guidance to States parties on the inclusion of older women's situation in the process of reporting on the implementation of the Convention. The elimination of all forms of discrimination against older women can only be achieved by fully respecting and protecting the dignity, the right to integrity and the self-determination of older women.

Older women and discrimination: specific areas of concern

11. Both men and women experience age-based discrimination, but older women experience ageing differently. The impact of gender inequalities throughout their lifespan is exacerbated in old age and is often based on deep rooted cultural and social norms. The discrimination that older women experience is often a result of an unfair allocation of resources, maltreatment, neglect and limited access to basic services.

12. The concrete form that discrimination against older women takes may differ considerably in various socio-economic circumstances and sociocultural environments, depending on whether equality of opportunities and choices regarding education, work, health, family and private life have been enhanced or limited. In many countries, the lack of telecommunication skills, access to the Internet or adequate housing and social services, together with loneliness and isolation, pose problems for older women. Older women living in rural areas or urban slums often suffer a severe lack of basic resources for subsistence, income security, access to health care and information on and enjoyment of their entitlements and rights.

13. The discrimination that older women experience is often multidimensional, with age-based discrimination compounding other forms of discrimination based on sex, gender, ethnic origin, disability, level of poverty, sexual orientation and gender identity, migrant status, marital and family status, and literacy, among other grounds. Older women who are members of minority, ethnic or indigenous groups, or who are internally displaced or stateless often experience a disproportionate degree of discrimination.

14. Many older women face neglect as they are considered no longer active in their productive and reproductive roles and are seen as a burden to their families. Widowhood and divorce exacerbate discrimination. Furthermore, the lack of or limited access to health-care services for diseases and geriatric conditions such as diabetes, cancer (in particular the forms of cancer most prevalent among older women), hypertension, heart disease, cataracts, osteoporosis and Alzheimer's disease, prevent older women from fully enjoying their human rights.

15. The full development and advancement of women cannot be achieved without taking a life cycle approach that recognizes and addresses the different stages of women's lives — childhood, adolescence, adulthood and old age — and their impact on the enjoyment of human rights by older women. The rights enshrined in the Convention are applicable at all stages of a woman's life but, in many countries, age-based discrimination continues to be tolerated and accepted at the individual, institutional and policy levels, and few countries have legislation prohibiting discrimination based on age.

16. Gender stereotyping and traditional and customary practices can have harmful impacts on all areas of the lives of older women, in particular older women with disabilities, including on family relationships, community roles, their portrayal in the media and the attitudes of employers, health-care and other service providers, and can result in violence and psychological, verbal and financial abuse.

17. Older women are often discriminated against because they lack the opportunity to participate in political and decision-making processes. Lack of identification documents and the means of transportation may prevent older women from voting. In some countries, older women may not form or participate in associations or other non-governmental groups to campaign for their rights. Further, mandatory retirement ages may differ for women and men, forcing women to retire earlier, which may result in discrimination against older women, including those who wish to represent their Governments at the international level.

18. Older women with refugee status or who are stateless or asylum-seekers, as well as those who are internally displaced or are migrant workers, often face discrimination, abuse and neglect. Older women affected by forced displacement or statelessness may suffer from post-traumatic stress syndrome, which may not be recognized or treated by health-care providers. Older refugee and internally displaced women are sometimes denied access to health care because they lack legal status in the country of asylum, lack legal documentation, have been resettled far from health-care facilities or experience cultural and language barriers in accessing services.

19. Employers often regard older women as a non-profitable investment for education and vocational training. In addition, older women do not have equal educational opportunities to learn modern information technology or the resources to obtain them. Many poor older women, especially older women with disabilities and those living in rural areas, have been denied the right to education and have received little or no formal or informal education. Illiteracy and innumeracy can severely restrict older women's full participation in public and political life, the economy and access to a whole range of services, entitlements and recreational activities.

20. There are fewer women in the formal employment sector. Women also tend to be paid less than men for the same work or work of equal value. Gender-based discrimination in employment throughout the life of women has a cumulative impact in old age, compelling older women to face disproportionately lower income and lower or no access to pensions compared with older men. The Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, in its general comment No. 19, recognized that non-contributory schemes will be required in almost all States since it is unlikely that everyone can be adequately covered through an insurance-based system (para. 4 (b)). The provision of social protection for older women, particularly those with disabilities, is provided for in the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (art. 28, para. 2 (b)). Even when women are entitled to an old-age pension, the amount thereof is closely linked to the wages they have earned, which results in lower pensions compared with those of men. Furthermore, older women are particularly affected by mandatory retirement ages that are different from those of men, which constitutes discrimination on the basis of age and sex. The retirement age for women should be optional so as to protect older women's right to continue working if they choose to and to accumulate increased pension benefits, where applicable, on a par with men. Many older women provide, care for, or are the sole caregivers of, dependent young children, spouses/partners or old parents. The financial and emotional cost of this unpaid care work is rarely recognized.

21. Older women's rights to self-determination and consent regarding health care are not always respected. Social services, including provisions for long-term care, for older women might be disproportionately reduced when public expenditure is cut. Post-menopausal, post-reproductive and age-related physical and mental health conditions and diseases tend to be neglected in research, academic studies, public policy and service provision. Information on sexual health and HIV and AIDS is rarely provided in a form that is acceptable, accessible and appropriate for older women. Many older women have no private health insurance or are excluded from State-provided schemes because they have not contributed to schemes during a lifetime of work in the informal sector or in unpaid care.
22. Older women may not be eligible to claim family benefits if they are not the parent or legal guardian of children for whom they care.
23. Microcredit and finance schemes usually have age restrictions or other criteria that prevent older women from accessing them. Many older women, particularly those who are confined to their homes, are unable to participate in community, cultural and recreational activities, which leaves them isolated and has a negative impact on their well-being. Insufficient attention is often given to the requirements for independent living such as personal assistance, adequate housing, including, accessible housing arrangements and mobility aids.
24. In many countries, the majority of older women live in rural areas where access to services is made more difficult due to their age and poverty levels. Many older women receive irregular, insufficient or no remittances from their migrant worker children. Denial of their rights to water, food and housing is part of the everyday lives of many poor, rural older women. For example, older women may not be able to afford adequate food because of the price of food and the inadequacy of their income due to discrimination in employment, social security and access to resources. Lack of appropriate or affordable transport can prevent older women from accessing social services or participating in community and cultural activities. Such lack of access to transport could be the result, for example, of the lower income earned by older women and a public policy that neglects to provide affordable and accessible public transport meeting the needs of older women.
25. Climate change affects women, especially older women, differently. Older women are more vulnerable because of physical and biological differences that can place them at a disadvantage in their initial response to natural hazards, because of social norms and given roles that affect the way they react to a disaster, and because of an inequitable distribution of aid and resources resulting from social hierarchies. Older women's limited access to resources and decision-making processes increases their vulnerability to climate change.
26. Under some statutory and customary laws, women do not have the right to inherit and administer marital property on the death of their spouse. Some legal systems justify this by providing widows with other means of economic security, such as support payments from the deceased's estate. However, in reality, these obligations are seldom enforced, and widows are left destitute. Some of those laws particularly discriminate against older widows. Older widows are particularly vulnerable to "property grabbing".

27. Older women are particularly vulnerable to exploitation and abuse, including economic abuse, when their legal capacity is deferred to lawyers or family members without their consent.

28. As stated by the Committee in its general recommendation No. 21: “Polygamous marriage contravenes a woman’s right to equality with men, and can have such serious emotional and financial consequences for her and her dependants that such marriages ought to be discouraged and prohibited”. Nevertheless, polygamy continues in many States parties and there are many women in existing polygamous unions. Older wives are often neglected in polygamous marriages once they are considered to be no longer reproductively or economically active.

Recommendations

General

29. Older women must be regarded as an important resource in society and it is an obligation for States parties to take all appropriate measures, including legislation, to eliminate discrimination against older women. States parties should adopt gender-sensitive and age-specific policies and measures, including temporary special measures, in line with article 4, paragraph 1 of the Convention and general recommendations No. 23 (1997) and No. 25 (2004), to ensure that older women participate fully and effectively in the political, social, economic, cultural, civil and any other field in their societies.

30. States parties have an obligation to ensure the full development and advancement of women throughout their life cycle, in times of both peace and conflict, as well as in the event of man-made and natural disasters. States parties should therefore ensure that all legal provisions, policies and interventions aimed at the full development and advancement of women do not discriminate against older women.

31. States parties’ obligations should take into account the multidimensional nature of discrimination against women and ensure that the principle of gender equality applies throughout the life cycle, in law and in its practical realization. In this regard, States parties should repeal or amend existing laws, regulations and customs that discriminate against older women and ensure that legislation prohibits discrimination on the grounds of age and sex.

32. In order to support legal reform and policy formulation, States parties should collect, analyse and disseminate data disaggregated by age and sex, and thus provide information on the situation of older women, including those living in rural areas and areas of conflict, older women belonging to minority groups and older women with disabilities. Such data should especially focus, among other issues, on poverty, illiteracy, violence, unpaid work (including caregiving to those living with or affected by HIV/AIDS), and migration, as well as access to health care, housing, social and economic benefits and employment.

33. States parties should provide older women with information on their rights and how to access legal services. They should train the police, the judiciary and legal aid and paralegal services on the rights of older women and sensitize and train public authorities and institutions on age- and gender-related issues that affect older women. Information, legal services, effective remedies and reparation must be made equally available and accessible to older women with disabilities.

34. States parties should enable older women to seek redress for and resolve infringements of their rights, including the right to administer property and ensure that older women are not deprived of their legal capacity on arbitrary or discriminatory grounds.

35. States parties should ensure that climate change and disaster risk reduction measures are gender-responsive and sensitive to the needs and vulnerabilities of older women. States parties should also facilitate the participation of older women in decision-making for climate change mitigation and adaptation.

Stereotypes

36. States parties have an obligation to eliminate negative stereotyping and modify social and cultural patterns of conduct that are prejudicial and harmful to older women, and thereby reduce the physical, sexual, psychological, verbal and economic abuse that older women, including older women with disabilities, experience based on negative stereotyping and negative cultural practices.

Violence

37. States parties have an obligation to recognize and prohibit violence against older women, including those with disabilities, in legislation on domestic violence, sexual violence and violence in institutional settings. States parties should investigate, prosecute and punish all acts of violence against older women, including those committed as a result of traditional practices and beliefs.

38. States parties should pay special attention to the violence suffered by older women in times of armed conflict, the impact of armed conflicts on the lives of older women and the contribution that older women can make to the peaceful settlement of conflicts as well as to reconstruction processes. When addressing sexual violence, forced displacement and the conditions of refugees during armed conflict, States parties should give due consideration to the situation of older women. States parties should take into account relevant United Nations resolutions on women and peace and security when addressing such matters, including, in particular, Security Council resolutions 1325 (2000), 1820 (2008) and 1889 (2009).

Participation in public life

39. States parties have an obligation to ensure that older women have the opportunity to participate in public and political life and hold public office at all levels and that older women have the necessary documentation to register to vote and run as candidates for election.

Education

40. States parties have an obligation to ensure equality of opportunity in the field of education for women of all ages and to ensure that older women have access to adult education and lifelong learning opportunities, as well as to the educational information they need for their well-being and that of their families.

Work and pension benefits

41. States parties have an obligation to facilitate the participation of older women in paid work without facing any discrimination based on their age and sex. States parties should ensure that special attention is paid to overcoming problems that older women might face in their working life and that older women are not forced into early retirement or similar situations. States parties should also monitor the impact of gender-related pay gaps on older women.

42. States parties have an obligation to ensure that retirement ages in both the public and private sectors do not discriminate against women. Consequently, States parties have an obligation to ensure that pension policies do not discriminate against women, even when women opt to retire early, and that all older women who have worked have access to adequate pensions. States parties should adopt all appropriate measures, including, where necessary, temporary special measures, to guarantee such pensions.

43. States parties should ensure that older women, including those who have responsibility for the care of children, have access to appropriate social and economic benefits such as childcare benefits, as well as access to all necessary support when caring for elderly parents or relatives.

44. States parties should provide adequate non-contributory pensions on an equal basis with men to all women who have no other pension or insufficient income security and State-provided allowances should be available and accessible to older women, particularly those living in remote or rural areas.

Health

45. States parties should adopt a comprehensive health-care policy for the protection of the health needs of older women, in line with general recommendation No. 24, on women and health. Such a policy should ensure affordable and accessible health care to all older women through, where appropriate, the elimination of user fees for older women, the training of health workers in geriatric illnesses, the provision of medicine to treat age-related chronic and non-communicable diseases, long-term health and social care, including care that allows for independent living, and palliative care. It should also include interventions promoting behavioural and lifestyle changes to delay the onset of health problems, such as healthy nutritional practices and active living, and affordable access to health-care services, including screening and treatment for diseases, in particular those most prevalent among older women. Health policies must also ensure that health care provided to older women, including those with disabilities, is based on the free and informed consent of the person concerned.

46. States parties should adopt special programmes tailored to the physical, mental, emotional and health needs of older women, paying special attention to women belonging to minorities, women with disabilities and women tasked with caring for grandchildren and other young family dependants because of the migration of young adults, or caring for family members living with or affected by HIV/AIDS.

Economic empowerment

47. States parties have an obligation to eliminate discrimination in all its forms against older women in economic and social life. They should remove any barriers based on age and sex to access agricultural credit and loans and ensure access to appropriate technology for older women farmers and small landholders. States parties should provide special support systems and collateral-free microcredit and encourage micro-entrepreneurship for older women. States parties should also create recreational facilities for older women and provide outreach services to older women who are confined to their homes. States parties should provide affordable and appropriate transportation to enable older women, including those living in rural areas, to participate in economic and social life, including community activities.

Social benefits

48. States parties should take the measures necessary to ensure that older women have access to adequate housing that meets their specific needs and remove architectural and other barriers hindering the mobility of older persons and leading to forced confinement. States parties should provide social services that enable older women to remain at home and live independently for as long as possible. States parties should ensure that laws and practices affecting older women's right to housing, land and property are abolished. States parties should also protect older women against forced evictions and homelessness.

Rural and other vulnerable older women

49. States parties should ensure that older women are included and represented in rural and urban development planning processes. States parties should provide affordable water, electricity and other utilities to older women. Policies to increase access to safe water and adequate sanitation should ensure that related technologies are designed so that they are accessible and do not require undue physical strength.

50. States parties should ensure the protection of older women with refugee status or who are stateless, as well as those who are internally displaced or are migrant workers, through the adoption of appropriate gender- and age-sensitive laws and policies.

Marriage and family life

51. States parties have an obligation to repeal all legislation that discriminates against older women in marriage and upon its dissolution, including in the areas of property and inheritance.

52. States parties must repeal all legislation that discriminates against older widows in respect of property and inheritance and protect them from "land grabbing". They must adopt laws of intestate succession that comply with their obligations under the Convention. Furthermore, they should take measures to end practices that force older women to marry against their will and should ensure that succession is not conditional on forced marriage to a deceased husband's sibling or any other person.

53. States parties should discourage and prohibit polygamous unions, in accordance with general recommendation No. 21, and ensure that upon the death of a polygamous husband, his estate is shared among the wives and their respective children on a basis of equality.

Annex V

Decision 47/VII Statement on the establishment of the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women

The Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women wishes to welcome the creation of the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women) as a new entity to accelerate progress in meeting the needs of women and girls worldwide. Its establishment is both timely and relevant for the strengthening and mainstreaming of gender issues in the United Nations system.

UN-Women represents a clear recognition of the centrality of women's advancement and gender equality for the United Nations. It gives greater visibility to these key objectives and brings the integrated treatment of gender issues in the United Nations system closer to reality. Gender equality is not only a basic human right, its achievement is a key factor for socio-economic development, security and peace.

The Committee is very pleased with the appointment of the former President of Chile, Michelle Bachelet, to lead UN-Women. Her internationally recognized commitment to the substantive equality of women, and her personal and professional qualifications are an assurance that the new entity will be under the most competent and highest level of leadership.

UN-Women will have a key role in helping Member States to implement global standards and norms for the protection of women. The Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women provides a universal and comprehensive international human rights framework for the protection and advancement of women, and the Committee monitors its implementation by the States parties. Furthermore, the Committee, through its Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, receives complaints from individuals or groups and undertakes inquiries with respect to grave or systematic violations of rights under the Convention.

The Committee trusts that the establishment of UN-Women will serve to bolster the role played by the Committee and serve as an inspiration and an additional incentive for the universal ratification of the Convention and its Optional Protocol.

The Committee considers that it is crucial to create and develop strong links between UN-Women and the Committee, and looks forward to establishing close cooperation with UN-Women to contribute to furthering progress in achieving gender equality and women's advancement, thus both enhancing their work and strengthening synergies within the United Nations system.

Annex IX

Report of the Committee under the Optional Protocol on follow-up to views of the Committee on individual communications

1. Under article 7, paragraphs 4 and 5, of the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (see General Assembly resolution 54/4, annex), States parties are obliged to give due consideration to the views and recommendations of the Committee, if any, and to submit follow-up information within six months. Further information may be sought from the State party, including in its subsequent reports. Rule 73 of the Committee's rules of procedure^a relates to the procedure for follow-up to the views of the Committee, in particular the designation and functions of the rapporteur or working group on follow-up. Rule 74^a states that information on follow-up, including the decisions of the Committee on follow-up, shall not be confidential unless otherwise decided by the Committee.

2. During its eighth session, held from 2 to 4 August 2006, prior to the thirty-sixth session of the Committee, the Working Group on Communications under the Optional Protocol discussed the first ad hoc mechanism established by the Committee in the area of follow-up to views, namely the designation of two rapporteurs on follow-up to the Committee's views on A. T. v. Hungary (communication No. 2/2003). The Working Group recommended that the Committee: (a) refrain from setting up a permanent follow-up mechanism for the time being and instead, in conformity with rule 73 of its rules of procedure, continue to undertake follow-up on an ad hoc basis; (b) entrust the Working Group with follow-up activities for the time being; (c) continue to appoint two rapporteurs on follow-up to views, preferably the Case Rapporteur, when feasible, and a member of the Working Group; and (d) once it has deemed that satisfactory follow-up information has been received from the State party concerned, and in accordance with article 7, paragraph 5, of the Optional Protocol, invite that State party to submit further information about any measures taken in its subsequent reports under article 18 of the Convention, and relieve the follow-up rapporteurs of their duties and reflect such action in its annual report.

3. During its ninth session, held from 5 to 7 February 2007, prior to the thirty-seventh session of the Committee, the Working Group recommended that the Committee appoint Anamah Tan and Pramila Patten as rapporteurs on follow-up to the views of the Committee on A. S. v. Hungary (communication No. 4/2004). During its tenth session, held from 18 to 20 July 2007, Ms. Tan and Ms. Patten briefed the Working Group on the latest submission of the State party submitted in response to the Committee's request for further information. During the eleventh session, held from 9 to 11 January 2008, the Follow-up Rapporteurs briefed the Committee on the follow-up to the Committee's views on communication No. 4/2004, and requested the secretariat to facilitate a meeting between them and a representative of the Permanent Mission of Hungary to the United Nations Office at Geneva.

^a Official Records of the General Assembly, Fifty-sixth Session, Supplement No. 38 (A/56/38), annex I.

4. During its twelfth session (21 to 23 July 2008), as part of the harmonization process, and for the purposes of ensuring consistency with other treaty bodies, which all now implement follow-up procedures and issue follow-up reports, the Working Group recommended to the Committee that it adopt follow-up reports on views at each session. Such an approach was considered even more relevant for the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women, in the light of the fact that it is the first committee to have, as mentioned above, codified States parties' obligations in the treaty itself (rather than simply in the rules of procedure) to give due consideration to the Committee's views and provide information thereon. The publication of these reports in the annual report, which would include summaries of follow-up responses, would highlight the importance of this part of the Committee's work and allow other stakeholders access to information on follow-up. The Working Group recalled that, as mentioned above, under its rules of procedure information on follow-up shall not be confidential unless otherwise decided by the Committee. This is also the approach taken by other treaty bodies.

5. The Working Group recommended that a follow-up report containing information received from the States parties and/or authors since the previous session should be prepared under the direction of the rapporteur(s) on follow-up or the Working Group for each session of the Committee. The three interim follow-up reports would then be compiled and published in the Committee's annual report. The reports should adopt a format similar to that adopted by the other treaty bodies, providing, inter alia, a summary of the information provided by the State party, any information provided by the author and a "decision" of the Committee. In situations where the Committee does not make a final decision on the nature of a State party's response, it should state that "the dialogue is ongoing". Where a satisfactory response has been received, the case should be closed, as the Committee has already done in the case of A. T. v. Hungary (communication No. 2/2003). The Committee agreed to the Working Group's recommendations and adopted, at its forty-second session, a follow-up report submitted to it by the Working Group and, at its forty-third session, an oral follow-up report.

6. The contents of the follow-up reports considered at the forty-sixth, forty-seventh and forty-eighth sessions are set out below and consist of a summary of all information on follow-up to the Committee's views received from the authors and States parties by the Committee up until the end of the forty-eighth session.^b Each subsequent annual report will contain a section compiling information from the follow-up reports.

^b No follow-up decisions were taken at the Committee's forty-sixth session. The nineteenth meeting of the Working Group on Communications under the Optional Protocol was held after the forty-eighth session of the Committee. It should be noted that by its decision 46/1, the Committee decided that its Working Group on Communications under the Optional Protocol, which convenes three times a year for a total of 10 working days, will meet immediately prior to the scheduled sessions of the Committee, except when the election of new experts to the Committee results in the expiration of the mandate of the Working Group members. In that case, the Working Group will meet after the Committee's session at which members of the Working Group are appointed.

Due date for State party response	22 February 2007
Date of replies	12 April 2007, 17 July 2007, 20 July 2009
State party response	On 12 April 2007, the State party informed the Committee that, on 22 September 2006, an interdepartmental working group had been set up by the Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs in collaboration with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Ministry of Health to consider how to implement the Committee's views.

On the issue of compensation, the Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs requested the Public Foundation for the Rights of Patients, Welfare Recipients and Children, a body established by the Government, to advise on the amount of compensation to be given and to meet the requirements as set out in the Committee's recommendation.

The Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs and the Ministry of Health would organize a joint seminar on drafting a methodology circular. A package of informational documents, including on the Committee and its general recommendations, would be delivered to the gynaecological wards in all county hospitals. As to the request that it amend its legislation, the State party argued that its domestic statutes were in conformity with its international commitments and that no amendment was required.

On the recommendation to monitor health centres, the State party submitted that inspection of sterilization procedures would henceforth be arranged and included in the annual workplan; the Health Department and Health Authority would elaborate and issue a common guideline; the National Professional Oversight Methodological Centre would integrate in its 2007 workplan for the professional monitoring of health-care institutions the inspection of occurrences relating to discrimination against women; and the Health Department would elaborate a recommendation emphasizing women's human rights and target future employees of health-care institutions.

On 17 July 2007, the State party responded to the Committee's note verbale of 6 June 2007 (see below), providing detailed responses to the Committee's questions. It submitted that the issue of compensation fell outside the scope of the work of the Public Foundation for the Rights of Patients, Welfare Recipients and Children, as the case had already gone through the court system. It also stated, inter alia, that: the national seminar, which was to be held in October-November 2007, would be the basis for the drafting of the methodological letter and a recommendation to physicians on the human rights of women; the information packages had been distributed to all county hospitals; health-related documentation, including that relating to sterilizations, would be kept for at least 30 years; and medical education included courses connected with the health of women. It also provided detailed information on the role of national medical supervisors and the operation of institutions representing patients' rights. Finally, the State party reiterated that there was no need to amend its legislation arguing, inter alia, that the general provisions on information were also applicable for sterilizations performed for health reasons and that, therefore, special information was not necessary. As to the discretionary powers of physicians, the State party argued that the conditions must be concurrent, i.e., that there would be a direct threat to the life or physical soundness of the mother or a high probability of any serious deficiency of the child to be born and that no other method of contraception was possible or recommended. For the State party, the discretionary powers were thus very limited.

Author's response

On 31 July 2007, the author provided a detailed commentary on the State party's submission, maintaining that the measures outlined by the State party were not sufficient for the implementation of the Committee's views. The author argued, inter alia, that the compensation provided should be commensurate with the violation suffered and suggested a figure of 3 million Hungarian forints (approximately 12,000 euros); the measures taken by the State party to ensure that the relevant provisions of the Convention and the Committee's views were known and adhered to by all relevant personnel were vague and inadequate and that they had not reached many important stakeholders; the Ethical Code should be amended; the text of the Convention and recommendations of the Committee were not easily accessible and should be distributed more widely; medical ethics and reproductive rights should have a higher priority in the medical curriculum; existing mechanisms for redress should be strengthened; standard rules on counselling should be laid down; there should be appropriate sanctions in cases of forced sterilization; and the Public Health Act should be amended in line with the Committee's recommendation on informed consent. The author provided suggestions for several amendments to the Public Health Act, including information on the permanent nature of the operation. She denied that sterilization ever had a "life-saving" function, as argued by the State party, and was concerned that the special information procedure and waiting period were not required when the sterilization had a "medical indication" based on the opinion of the doctor. The State party's view that it was obvious that it was not necessary to inform the applicant on other alternatives of contraception, as the medical indication presupposed that the patient could not use other methods of contraception for health reasons, disregarded the contraceptive options of the male partner. She recommended that the compulsory waiting period for sterilization for family planning reasons should be reduced; the chance of withdrawing the request for sterilization at any time should once again be part of national law; and the concept of medical indications for sterilization should be reconsidered, as such a justification had often been abused and thus removed from the legal provisions of many countries. It was never appropriate for a doctor to make this decision for another person. She also requested a public apology from the State party.

On 20 November 2009, the author confirmed and welcomed the fact that the State party had provided compensation. She also welcomed the fact that important steps had been taken to ensure the compatibility of Hungarian laws with international law. However, according to the author, their recommendations have not been fully implemented to date and failure to do so posed a continuing threat to the well-being of women in the State party.

She recommended that article 187 (7) of the Hungarian Public Health Act should be amended. Currently, it suggests that sterilization can be a life-saving intervention. However, the author argues that this is never the case and that risk of pregnancy can always be averted by contraception. It should never be for a doctor to make this decision for his or her patient.

She also recommended that as part of informed consent a patient should be advised about the permanent consequences of sterilization. In addition, the yearly workplan of the National Centre for Healthcare Audit and Inspection should include monitoring sterilization in its yearly workplan, as currently inspections were only based on specific complaints.

This submission was sent to the State party with a request for comments by 29 June 2009.

Further action taken

On 5 June 2007, the Rapporteurs met with a representative of the State party at United Nations Headquarters.

Following that meeting, the Rapporteurs sent a note verbale, dated 6 June 2007, on behalf of the Committee to the State party requesting further information, including whether advice had been given on the amount of compensation to be given to the author and whether she had received it; the proposed date for the seminar; the timetable for the drafting of the methodology circular; the development of the recommendation to introduce a component on women's health issues into medical training; the timeline for the issuance of the common protocol by the Health Department and the Health Authority as well as for the elaboration of the recommendation on women's human rights; and whether the package of documents would be distributed to public and private institutions, including hospitals and clinics.

The Committee reiterated its recommendation that consideration be given to amending paragraph 187 (a) of the Public Health Act, whereby, according to the Committee, a physician is allowed to deliver the sterilization without the information procedure generally specified when it seems to be appropriate in given circumstances; and recommended that records of all sterilization procedures conducted in both public and private health institutions be kept on a regular basis. It commended the State party on the efforts made to better monitor sterilization procedures.

On 25 January 2008, the Rapporteurs met with a representative of the State party at the United Nations Office at Geneva, at which time the Rapporteurs were informed that the Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs and the Ministry of Health were actively consulting on the provision of compensation for the author of the communication.

Following that meeting, a note verbale dated 31 January 2008 was sent to the State party requesting it to ensure that the compensation be commensurate with the gravity of the violations of the author's rights. On 16 June, the Secretariat contacted the Permanent Representative of Hungary to the United Nations (Geneva) with a view to following up on the note verbale. The Permanent Representative stated that she would contact her capital to see if any updated information could be provided to the Committee before its session in July.

On 15 October 2008, the Rapporteurs met again with the State party representative during the forty-second session of the Committee. The representative orally provided the Rapporteurs with information on the follow-up to this case, in particular on further amendments to legislation arising from the Committee's decision, as well as information on the development of a legal framework to enable the State party, inter alia, to provide compensation to complainants following violations of their rights under the Covenant. He also informed the Rapporteurs about the provision of psychiatric support for the author.

During that meeting, the Rapporteurs indicated that the State party had already paid compensation following judgements of the European Court of Human Rights, apparently without the necessity of a legal framework; the State party representative requested copies of such decisions.

Those decisions were subsequently forwarded to the Permanent Mission with a request for a written update on the follow-up to this case.

Additional information by the State party	On 20 July 2009, the State party informed the Committee that it had paid the sum of 5.4 million Hungarian forints (approximately $28,000) to the author by way of compensation.
Additional information from the complainant	On 20 November 2009, the complainant's counsel welcomed the payment of compensation by the State party. It noted, however, that the State party has not fully implemented the Committee's recommendations, i.e. to ensure that Hungarian law regulating sterilization is fully in line with international standards.
Committee's decision	At its forty-seventh session, while noting the latest comments by the complainant's counsel, the Committee decided to bring consideration of the follow-up to its views on this case to a close.
